Coach Randy of Project NextGen Partners with Sprigeo's Online Bully Reporting System

LIVINGSTON, NJ - Randy Nathan (aka Coach Randy) President/CEO of Project NextGen announces an innovative partnership with Sprigeo and their online Bully Reporting System. Coach Randy is a national trainer, anti-bullying professional and is considered Fox 5's Good Day NY's area expert. In addition he works with schools, coaches, students and teams throughout the country implementing and understanding the impact of bullying in schools and sports.

The Sprigeo System is the result of thirty years of education experience, 3000 hours of software design and consultation from school administrators, researchers, psychologists, teachers, parents and students. It functions as both an online reporting system that allows students, teachers and parents to report incidents anonymously and an administrative tool for identifying behavior trends and demonstrating accountability. Sprigeo represents a trusted online source, where youth and teens can report bullying and safety threats without the fear of retaliation. In addition, Sprigeo has the Heroes Project and offers substantial resources for students, parents and educators. Founder, Joe Bruzzese created Sprigeo so that people would have a safe way to report bullying and safety concerns.

Coach Randy says, "The Sprigeo system is the first to offer an application for smart phones as well as online. Today's students are extremely connected and the anonymity of this system is very valuable. Most students want to do something, but fear retribution. This application allows those students who want to confront the bully and be able to notify the appropriate adults in their community." David Brozin, Director of Business Development shares in the excitement. "Coach Randy is highly motivated to help students learn how to stand up to bullies and bullying behavior. His programs, combined with our innovative application create a unique opportunity for schools to ensure they are offering the best messages, as well as tools to intervene such negative behavior."

We are becoming more aware of the negative components of bullying behavior and parents, schools and administrators can benefit from this important partnership.
